Our Proud History

In the Spring of 1912, Henry Oldfield of Norwich, England moved his family to Australia.

Trained as a Master Brush Maker, Henry saw an opportunity for quality paint brushes to be made and sold in his new home country.

In 1916, he opened a fledgling brush making business in a small factory on Charlotte Street, Campsie (South West Sydney). Here, Henry Oldfield's vision was to create quality painting tools for the professional painter.

Despite the many decades and many fads in between, Henry's vision remains the cornerstone of our modern operations.

It would be easy to view the early advancements made by Henry Oldfield with a sense of nostalgia, brushes of beautiful finish, distinguishingly hand-crafted and made to last.

This is all true, but at the core of what Henry Oldfield was delivering was innovation. Brushes and tools that were better than those which came before them.

Creating brushes and tools that are better than those which came before them - is in Oldfield's DNA.

We don't do this for our own benefit, just like Henry Oldfield, we place the needs of the professional painter first and foremost.

Best paint equipment, best tools, best result.
